The Woman in the Case

"I suppose all mothers have to go through with it," said Mrs. Carlson, as she removed her wraps and handed them to the waiting maid, "but it seems rather hard to lose my little boy." The expression of her face was half sad, half merry, and the smile in her eyes was brighter because of the mist of tears that covered them.

Her mother looked slightly alarmed, and then, sympathetic, "Ah! I know," she said, "you are beginning to realize that Donald is growing up. He will be 15 next June, won't he? But what brought it especially to your mind? Something must have happened."

Mrs. Carlson shrugged her eloquent shoulders. "He is in love, I believe. I had hoped he would postpone the inevitable a few years, but I suppose it had to come. You know, he used always to tell me everything—his quarrels with other boys, his ambitions and all, but he says nothing about this. I have observed the difference for several months. You remember how careless he used to be about his appearance?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Smith, as she rang for tea, "but I have noticed recently that he has improved very much."

"That was the first I noticed of it," replied her daughter. "He has developed an exquisiteness in his choice of ties and he even blacks his boot heels. Also he has demanded long trousers and refuses to appear in knickers. His appetite has toned down wonderfully and he moves around with a silly look on his face that one cannot help remarking. I have no clue as to who the divinity may be that he worships but his father says Donald's actions remind him vividly of his own calf-love days and—"

Charles O. Whitely Addresses Christian Associations

The Christian Associations met together Wednesday, January 20, in the auditorium. The service was in charge of Charles O. Whitely, pastor of the Friends church, his subject being "Evangelism." Mr. Whitely said that while there was a place for the "expert evangelist" every christian person can and should be an evangelist, for all can tell the gospel message. He referred to some of the present day "evangelists" such as Gypsy Smith, J. Wilbur Chapman and Billy Sunday, as representing the quiet but forceful style, the moderate and extremely sensational type of evangelism. After all, it is not so much the method of presenting truth, but the presentation of truth, that counts.

Pacific Vs. McMinnville

On Friday evening, January 22, Pacific lost her first league game of the season to the McMinnville quartet. Much interest was shown in the student body, and the yelling and singing was superior to that of past years.

The McMinnville team showed up much as it did last year at the close of the season. While the Pacific team seemed to have suffered from the loss of last year's big center, Emmett Guley, the boys of the local team, while they showed staying ability and played spurts of real basket ball, lacked the speed for breaking up McMinnville's plays. A prominent feature of the game was the dodging of the Mac boys near the goals, which enabled them to get more shots than were granted to the locals.

The members of the home team also failed to follow up their shots with the consistency which the visitors showed. With a few weeks' work Coach McMinn will make the team an entirely different machine for the rest of the league games, for while the home team was clearly outclassed, there was hardly the difference between the two teams that the score indicates.

Pacific started the first half with a rush, and before the Mac team could get on their feet, had gained a lead of six points; then the score tied and for five minutes it was "anybody's game." Pacific's spurt did not hold, however, and the Mac team forged ahead and kept out of danger. The score at the end of the first half was 8 to 17.

The beginning of the second half showed the same whirlwind start by Pacific, but they were unable to hold their pace. The final score was 20 to 39.

A preliminary game between the Alumni and the Faculty was won by the latter with a score of 17 to 4.

Referee Irke, star guard of the Weona team of Portland, deserves credit for keeping the play clean and fast.

The lineup was as follows:
Pacific College—Colcord, f; Replogle, f; Hinshaw, c; Butt, g; Haworth, g.

Mac—Black, f; Irish, f; Simpson, c; Bean, g; Waugeman, g.

Pacific at Mt. Angel

After changing cars several times and a hike of a mile and one-half, P. C. basket ball team arrived at the Catholic school on the hill. The game was called at 2:15 p. m. The score was close throughout the entire game, the score being tied several times.

Pacific was one point behind at the beginning of the second half, but gained a four-point lead, which they held until the last five minutes of play.

The lineup for P. C., which remained the same throughout the game, was Replogle and Colcord, forwards; Hinshaw, center; Haworth and Butt, guards. "Rep." made the most points for P. C. and Haworth played his usual steady game at back guard. Kennedy was the star for Mt. Angel. The final score was Mt. Angel, 23; Pacific, 17.

Library's New Book Shelves

Friends of Pacific again demonstrated their loyalty when four carpenters of the city donated their work upon the new book shelves in the library. These shelves were needed, as the library has been in a congested condition for some time. This is relieved since these shelves almost double the capacity, making room for approximately two thousand volumes.

Prof. M. D. Hawkins, head of the history department, journeyed to Forest Grove, Tuesday, Jan. 26, to act as judge of a debate between the High School of that city and Escatada High.

"Knocking" never won a basket ball game, or anything else, but "boosting" has. Try it.

We notice one of the professors in Reed has allowed his students to study their examination questions for two weeks before exams. This is interesting, but here at Pacific we have been asked to study our examination questions during the past four months and a half. Yea, verily.

Examinations are now the order of events, and for some time they mean extended agony, for others they are merely a part of the day's work, and of little consequence. No matter what their meaning may be, they are here for all of us; so put lots of "pep" into them and act as though we all liked them. Above all things, remember to exercise "that sense of honor," and if we flunk, then study harder next semester.

"Forest Grove, January 29, '15.
— Miss Gladys Hannon, Editor Crescent: If you have space in the Crescent, would like to take this means of expressing my appreciation to the student body for the 'send off' they gave the team today. Those of you who have not been on athletic teams do not know how much it helps the team to know that the student body is back of them. It just naturally puts new life into us, and though some may not realize it, the spirit that was shown this afternoon will enable us to play about 25 per cent better this evening than we would otherwise. If you want P. C.'s team to be at its best, continue to give us the spirited support that has been shown thus far. It does us good to know that the students appreciate our efforts, even though they are not always successful."—Harry H. Haworth.

Athletics, and particularly intercollegiate athletics, have many pleasant as well as beneficial features, but it seems that there are other phases sometimes manifest, Where good sportsmanship and manliness are displayed in the games, like in the recent game with our neighbor college, nothing speaks better for the reputation or advertisement of that college. But when those posing as loyal students of that institution, deface college buildings and property in the visiting town it cannot help but in a large measure destroy the good effect made in the game.

New Courses for the Second Semester

President Pennington will resume his classes this semester, giving a course in Practical Homiletics, Logic and in the Life of Christ. Plane Trigonometry, Birds and Trees of Oregon, College Botany, Elementary Forensics, Extemporaneous Speaking, Educational Psychology, Comparative Government, Tennyson and Browning and the American Short Story are among the new college classics that begin this semester.

Trefians.

The regular meeting of the Trefians was held in the dormitory parlors January 27. The first number of the program was the third edition of the Trefian Oracle, by Mae Moore, which was very interesting. Myrtle Thomas then gave a reading which was entertaining and much enjoyed by all. Following this an essay on girls was uniquely given by Esther Terrell and Anna Mills. A piano solo by Alta Gumm concluded the program.

Local Oratorical Centest

The local oratorical contest will be held in Wood-Mar Hall Friday, February 5. There will be six contests, and the one winning first place will represent Pacific in the state contest, which will be held at McMinnville in March. We invite the public to this contest. Admission 25c.

Miss Hazel Paulsen, P. A., '14, left today for Monmouth State Normal.

Miss Daisy Newhouse, '14, left Sunday for Monmouth, where she will take work in the Normal school.

Owing to a recent illness, Miss Lyra Miles was forced to return to her home at Salem for a few days' rest.

Miss Kenworthy (in history class—"Queen Elizabeth was a very brave woman to keep from being married.")

Gladys Hannon visited Miss Florence Rees, '12, over the week-end at her country home in Springbrook. Miss Rees returned to Monmouth Sunday evening.

Lewis Jones, of Albany College, arrived in Newberg Saturday, January 23, for the purpose of making arrangements for a debate to be held some time in April, between Albany and Pacific.

In honor of Miss Hazel Paulsen's birthday and prior to her leaving for Monmouth State Normal, a number of her girl friends spent a jolly evening at her home last Friday.

Tuesday, January 18. Prof. Weesner led chapel, taking for his subject "Concentration in Study." He emphasized the fact that it was not the amount of time one spent upon a lesson, but the intensity of thought that really counts.

Miss Kenworthy entertained a number of her friends Saturday evening, January 23, at the home of W. E. Terrell. Those present were Messrs. Corbett, Rees and Brinquist, Profs. Hawkins, Marshall and Spahr and Mr. and Mrs. Terrell and family.

The basket ball team of the third grade Preps. have made an enviable record for themselves this year, having lost but one game out of four that they have played. They have beaten Chehalem Center, West Chehalem and the freshmen's class of the High School. The freshmen of the High School won the class championship and thought themselves invincible, but were beaten by the third-years with a good score. Although the High School second team took them into camp, it is no disgrace, since the third-years have but nine men to pick from.

James L. Welch, of Seattle, spent Tuesday, January 19, in Newberg, visiting his daughter, Henrietta. Mr. Welch led the prayer meeting at Canyon Hall that evening, bringing many hopeful thoughts to those present. He is a minister of many years experience.

The class try-outs for the local oratorical contest occurred last week. Esther Miles and Walter Guyer were chosen to represent the freshman class, Alta Gumm and Meade Elliott from the sophomore class and Lyle Hubbard and Walter Wilson from the senior class. The juniors had no contestants.

Pacific, 15; P. U. 19

Another near victory was lost Friday night at Forest Grove to the basket tossers of Pacific University. The game was not very fast, although both teams showed flashes of speed at times. The gymnasium was heated entirely too warm, which was one cause of the slow playing. The P. U. quintet was well coached in dribbling, and a large part of their points were made by fast dribbling. Arthur Ireland was the star for P. U. He made six baskets. The largest part of Pacific's score was made by Replogle.

A return game will be played in our gymnasium next Saturday, night at 8 o'clock. This promises to be close, as the two teams are evenly matched.

Jamison, of Portland, was the referee. The line-up was:
P. U.—A. Ireland, f; Goodman, f; Robinson, c; J. Ireland, g; Lucas, g.
P. C.—Replogle, f; Colcord-Benson, f; Hinshaw-Edwards, c; Haworth, g; Butt, g.

was announced and the conversation turned to other channels.

Several weeks later Mrs. Carlson looked up from her reading as her son entered the living room. There was a feeling of pride as she noticed how tall he was getting and how manly he appeared in his new suit. As she was about to resume her book something in the boy's attitude caused her to look again. The square, youthful shoulders seemed to droop and all the life had vanished from the handsome boyish face. She checked the anxious inquiry on her lips and then struggled to repress the involuntary smile that followed.

That evening at dinner Donald refused a second helping of dessert and when Mr. Carlson spoke of the approaching marriage of one of the high school teachers the boy dropped his spoon on the floor.

"Isn't Miss Thomas your English teacher?" asked Mrs. Carlson.

"Yes," returned the boy chokingly.

His father looked at him with sudden insight; "A mighty fine teacher, too, isn't she, Don," he questioned quizzically, "couldn't you come up to her demands?"

The boy's face went scarlet but he made no answer.

"You will get over it," continued Mr. Carlson, disregarding his wife's signals, "I always did. Calf-love is usually severe but brief."

Donald sprang to his feet, "If you was not my father but just another man I'd thrash you for that," he cried furiously and left the room.

Carlson met his wife's reproachful eyes ruefully and then broke into laughter.

An hour later Mrs. Carlson knocked softly at her son's door. "Come in," the boy's voice answered and she entered to find him gazing out into the spring night. With the divine understanding of mothers she went to his side and spoke of the brightness of the stars and the frog's croaking that came to them out of the velvety gloom.

As she talked she placed her hand on his arm. Almost before he realized it Donald's head was on her shoulder and she was saying quietly, "Tell mother."

It wasn't much of a story. "I worked hard and intended to marry her as soon as I was old enough. And she encouraged me—she would smile at me and all that. And, mother, she has such white hands and uses such dandy cologne. Father treats me just like a kid but I know I'll never care for anyone again. She has destroyed all my faith in women."

Over the bowed head the mother's eyes smiled into the darkness at the manlike plaint. And then she sighed softly. She had regained her little boy, for awhile, at least.
