DR. LINCOLN WIRT THRILLS AUDIENCE

Presents Powerful Lecture, "In the Wake of the War," in Wood-Mar Hall.

With an unusually interesting and thrilling lecture, "In the Wake of the War," Dr. Lincoln Wirt opened the lyceum course Friday evening, October 26. Dr. Wirt is thoroughly conversant with his subject as he has recently returned from the war zone where he has studied the situation, not as an expert to formulate statistics, but as an ordinary man that he might present to the people of America conditions as he saw them.

In describing his trip Dr. Wirt emphasized the great contrast in the atmosphere of the people of America and of Europe. The people of Europe are not laughing or singing songs. They look haggard, sad and worn, while the number of women in mourning and number of men that are crippled add to the general air of depression. "The scars made on the landscape will disappear in time, but the scars in the hearts of the people will not be healed in a hundred years. The price of war is too vast for comprehension."

Dr. Wirt very vividly described the schrapnel shell, the "Jack Johnson," two of the most destructive shells used, and the terrible, inhuman, electrified barbed wire entanglements, "invented in hell but manufactured in Pennsylvania."

He declares that although the war is all for nothing, that nothing is being gained by either side, and that the war will end in a draw, the advancement of democracy will be one great result.

The desolation of European countries, the awful price that must be paid, not only by the present but by future generations, should make every true American count the cost of war before upholding a military program.

Dr. Wirt gave three reasons why he was convinced of the impossibility of a foreign invasion.

ANNUAL DRAG-OUT WON BY "BLUES"

Battles of Bags Friday, October 20, Short But Hard Fought
—Co-ed Rooters Pull Off Clever Stunts.

P. E., '20

The sun rose from a hazy horizon, the atmosphere was heavy with fog and smoke.

There seemed to be a restless spirit among the members of the student body. The ladies were all bedecked in white; the men wore a critical, watchful eye which was continually sizing up the other fellow.

After chapel the halls were conspicuous by their silence; four rooms were filled with councils of war. The excitement grew as the day advanced. At noon the same rooms were crowded with the same people who talked in the same low tones.

Behold, when these consultations broke up, the halls were filled with white dressed ladies wearing enormous blue "G's" on blouse and skirt.

The afternoon was noted for the absence of students from the library. Profs talked fast and furious to hold the attention of the students.

At last 3:50 arrived and the student body rushed from the class rooms and scattered to the four winds.

Four-fifteen found the grand stand filled with spectators and nine sacks scattered along the "fifty yard line" on the gridiron.

With much singing and yelling the Blue Rooters advanced on the field and proceeded by the aid of quack doctors, clever songs and yells to entertain the spectators.

Hardly had they gained the attention of their audience when the beating of a great drum heralded the advance of the "Golds" bedecked with gold colored hair ribbons and neckties, advancing on the "Blues'" territory with banners high, "stretcher" low and followed by the clown leading "Gully's Goat."

After much hostile action between the rooters and due consultation between opponents and referee, the "Blues" took the south goal line while the "Golds" took the north.

At the toot of Referee Hoskins' whistle the opposing sides clashed in the true spirit of the fray. Great shouts arose from the side lines. On the dusty battle field only flying arms and legs could be seen in the general mix-up of boys and bags. Occasionally a victor would tear away and rush frantically for the goal post to deposit his sack.

After what seemed hours to the fighters, in reality about twenty minutes, the referee's whistle blew again. It was closely followed by a great shout from the "Blues" as their goal held five of the nine sacks.

The wounded, injured, victors and vanquished were duly doctored with refreshments served by their loyal lady supporters.

Thus ended the great Battle of the Bags.

First—the United States is three thousand miles from a possible foe, which, according to statistics, would reduce the fighting efficiency two-thirds. Second—no nation is strong enough to protect herself at home and also attack a country the size of the United States. Third—at the close of the war every first class nation will be exhausted.

America is prepared to lead the world in establishing permanent peace. Dr. Wirt believes that a league with a policy providing fair and just consideration for all seems to offer the only solution. America should form such a league with the A, B, C nations of South America, thus influencing other nations to follow our example.

Pre-season basket ball series start next week. Everybody out!

GIRLS' GYM SCENE OF HALLOWE'EN REVELS

Jolly Masqueraders Explore Obstructed Subterranean Passages.

Saturday evening, October 28, occurred the annual Hallowe'en party of the student body, when sixty-five masked young people gathered in the girls' gymnasium, prepared for a hilarious time.

The first part of the evening was spent in attempting to pierce the clever disguises—witches, ghosts, Charlie Chaplins, Red Riding Hood, the Wolf, the Grandmother, clowns, pumpkins, shepherdesses, country beaux and lassies, were all in evidence. After a flashlight photograph had rendered immortal the delightful group, guests were permitted to unmask and were invited to visit Hades. With few exceptions they availed themselves of the opportunity to become acquainted with the historic spot, and, entering a narrow passageway, clambered out of a window, down a ladder and thence into the abode of the condemned. One ray of light pierced the Stygian darkness—this shone from the glowing word, "Hades." Visitors were requested to register and then were allowed to continue their explorations. Horrible sights and sounds assailed them—a dead dog—a bloody rope—a wild cry—at one place a witch was found who could be persuaded to reveal the future.

With great difficulty the guests regained the upper regions and there in the security of a lighted room, all listened with delicious shivers of terror to a blood-curdling ghost story related by President Pennington.

Lunch, consisting of generous sections of pumpkin pie, apple cider and peanuts, served at half past ten, concluded the evening's program.

Owing to the fact that the Crescent is trying to make up the deficiency in the treasury of last year it is considered advisable to use less expensive paper. If those who do not approve of the change will provide for the difference in expense we will be glad to resume the former style.

According to Bacon "Some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed and some few to be chewed and digested." We would like to suggest that when books are not undergoing the process of being tasted, swallowed, chewed or digested they ought to be kept in order. If a stranger should enter Wood-Mar hall at the north or south door imagine the erroneous impression that stranger would have of Pacific students if the first glance revealed books of all sizes, shapes and descriptions (not to mention papers and tablets) in a chaotic condition, some promiscuous piles in such a state of equilibrium that the weight of a finger would send them banging to the floor. With the variety of colors, sizes and thickness it may be impossible to give a student book rack the appearance of shelves in a well-ordered library but surely loose papers can be hidden beneath the covers of a tablet and the books arranged above in an orderly pile. Why not remove such earmarks of carelessness? "A word to the wise is sufficient."

CHAPEL JOTTINGS

In the first faculty chapel talk of the year, Prof. Lewis gave an explanation and a modern application of the teachings found in Ecclesiastes. "Today," said Mr. Lewis, "just as in the days in which the Preacher wrote, we are in grave danger of being misled by the glamour of the seemingly desirable. Too great stress is laid upon external beauties, overlooking the fact that beauty lies within each individual. Those who have accomplished most for humanity have received small recognition from the world; and he who comes forward today to help solve the problems of the age will find his reward only in his work."

Tuesday, October 17, Rex Wheeler, a Yale man who has been working in China for the past year, addressed the student body and faculty, telling of the great opportunities and needs in the Asiatic countries and especially in China. Young men and women of many occupations and professions are wanted—doctors, teachers, stenographers, nurses—no college student can feel that he has no talent that can be used by the Master in this great work.

Prof. Mills spoke October 20 on the need of college people coming to themselves. The war has accomplished much in that it has made men think. Men are thinking now not alone in terms of nations but also in regard to their relation to life. "It is time," said Mr. Mills, "that the student comes to his senses. College is the place to find oneself and the sooner the man or woman realizes his shortcomings and capabilities, the sooner will he be able to use his resources and accomplish his share of the world's work."

Mrs. Hodgkin talked Tuesday morning, October 24, on the uses of the library—books and rooms—that will result in the highest degree of efficiency. The rule of personal conduct and for the care of books and magazines is none other than the Golden Rule. Mrs. Hodgkin urged that each student develop the magazine habit—select some certain weekly magazine and through it keep alive to the topics of the day.

Thursday, October 26, Prof. Perisho spoke on the subject of "Courtesy." Courtesy is founded upon kindness, and must be something more than a veneer of etiquette; in fact, it is always legitimate to ignore a social usage that would put one of less advantages in a poor light. Anything that is not kind is impolite. Very common are the unkind habits of carrying on conversation at concerts and other entertainments and of perpetrating jokes that hurt because aimed at a weakness that the hearer has tried to overcome, or a peculiarity of which he is acutely and painfully conscious. These habits should be especially guarded against by every young man and woman, remembering that "nothing is polite that isn't kind."

Mrs. Frozelle, chairman of the good literature committee of the Parent-Teacher council of Portland, addressed the chapel audience Friday, October 27. In a clear, forceful manner the speaker called the attention of the young people of Pacific to the influence that reading exerts in their lives. "We cannot afford," said Mrs. Frazelle, "to ruin our minds with cheap fiction, and not only may mental development be arrested but our moral and spiritual natures may be seriously harmed. Admitting as an intimate a disreputable person, although it be through the pages of a magazine, cannot fail to besmirch our character. We cannot feed our minds today upon 'trash' and be intellectually keen tomorrow. 'We are the product of our yesterdays.'"

Y. W. C. A.

"Does my personal appearance express my true self?" This was the topic for discussion at Y. W. a week ago. Before the leader, Ruth Hinshaw, presented the subject, Lesta Cook and Christine Hollingsworth sang a duet, "Just for Today." Then followed the Scripture reading and Miss Hinshaw's remarks. A number of valuable suggestions were made by the leader, one being that one should be sure that her personal appearance always expresses her best self at all times, in all places.

The increased number of girls in school this year has made the Y. W. C. A. room uncomfortably full on Wednesday mornings. As a result the girls have changed their meeting place to the music room, at least for a time. The first meeting in the new room was in charge of the finance committee. Alta Gumm, the chairman of this committee and Y. W. treasurer, told why, for the sake of the individual members and for the help of the association in its broadest sense, the Y. W. C. A. member should not only pay the required dues but should also give systematically to the work of the association.

At the close of her talk cards for systematic pledges were distributed and signed. The meeting closed with the benediction.

BETWEEN OURSELVES

And Gulley says: "She's a Bear."

B. C. Miles, of Salem, was a Pacific visitor last Wednesday.

The girls at Kanyon hall had a house party last week end with themselves as guests.

Prof. L. in psychology—"What is the reason for the proverb, 'love is blind?' Well, that's enough, the answer is obvious."

President Pennington addressed the Multnomah county Older Boys conference Sunday afternoon, October 15, in Portland.

The college seniors have ordered their pins and invitations. They evidently believe in preparedness as they are ordering very early.

The men's glee club have been putting in hard practice and with the promising material which he has, Prof. Hull thinks the club will surpass that of last year.

Pluto—in psychology class trying to prove that a person may have his attention on more than one thing at once—"Lots of times I study my lesson with my mind clear off on something else and have just as good a lesson as I usually do."

President Pennington was to have spoken at the Yamhill county Christian Endeavor Convention last Sunday afternoon, but owing to circumstances over which he had no control he arrived there just in time to catch the train back. Well, he had a nice afternoon ride at least.

Last Sunday morning Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cook and son, Truman, motored from Portland to Newberg to visit Lesta and Marguerite Cook at Kanyon hall. Mrs. Cook, who expects to spend the winter with her parents in the middle west, did not return to Portland until Wednesday afternoon.

However it seems that the fourth year academy class has no mind of its own. It has several minds—in fact, about as many minds as there are class members, which made it very difficult to choose a class pin. It seems that they compromised and each one ordered the design he most fancied.

One regretful accident marred the first annual Drag-out contest. During the mix-up Miles suffered an injury that confined him to his room until last Wednesday. Since then he has been able to "navigate" with the aid of crutches. The junior class in a body visited him for a short time Tuesday morning.

The great question now before the friends and acquaintances of Lloyd Edwards, and one which for the present even over-shadows the coming presidential election, is this: Where, oh where was Pluto last Saturday, Sunday and Monday? According to his numerous stories he was "visiting an uncle in Vancouver," or he was "visiting friends in Seattle or Tacoma." However, the truth came out when he unthinkingly mentioned something that happened last Sunday at home. Yes, he was "home" alright. That accounts for the dreamy, far-away look in his eyes the rest of the week.

Feeling that athletically speaking the woman of the institution were a negligible quantity those interested met recently to form a permanent organization. The following officers were elected: Lyra Miles, president; Irene Hodgins, secretary; Lesta Cook, treasurer. Plans are being made for a gymnasium class under the supervision of Miss McCracken and if possible a basket ball team coached by Miss Sutton. Sufficient ground in front of Kanyon hall has been secured for a tennis court which will be plowed this fall preparatory to the completion of the court in the spring.

PENNINGTON LECTURES

The second of the series of extension lectures was given by President Pennington Tuesday evening, October 17. A general review of Shakespeare's life was given with special emphasis upon the importance of the time in which he lived in shaping his career. The wide range of subject matter, the skill with which the characters are handled in order to make them portray the human heart, and the mastery of form have combined to secure for him a place in the literary world that no one else has approached.

October 24 President Pennington lectured on "Midsummer Night's Dream." The sources, probable date and the origin of the name were discussed at length. A review of the plot was given and a number of the best passages read.

TREFIAN

The first program of the Trefian Literary Society was rendered Wednesday evening, October 18, at Kanyon hall parlors. After the business meeting in which a number of new members were received, the roll was called, each girl answering to her name with an original Autumn couplet. Harriett Hodgins then gave an excellent review of current events. Mary Sanders followed with a realistic reading, "Old October's Put-Nigh Gone." Alta Gumm gave an appreciation of Autumn which all enjoyed. The last number of this program was a stunt by Mary Pennington and Lorena Keeney. In a very humorous manner they represented two old maids putting up a stove after it had been stored away all summer.

The girls literary society is starting out with much enthusiasm this year and promises to be more successful than ever before.

Neil, at breakfast—"Knight gets up at daylight every morning."

Knight—"Yes, but these mornings it's so dark it's hard to tell when daylight comes."

PRE-SEASON BASKET BALL STARTS

Pres. Pennington called all the men in school together after chapel Monday, for the purpose of organizing a pre-season basket ball series. It was decided, after some discussion, to nominate five men of recognized basket ball ability to captain the five teams in the league. This, it was decided, would make all of the teams as near equal in strength as possible. Gulley, Colcord, H. Hinshaw, Guyer and Butt were chosen, who immediately chose their teams. The line-up of the men in school assures a hard played and exciting series, if not one of the best possible basket ball.

Girls, be out and root for the team "he" plays on. "He" will need all your help.

The schedule follows:

Gulley vs. Butt	Monday, November 6
Guyer vs. Hinshaw	Wednesday, November 8
Colcord vs. Butt	Thursday, November 9
Gulley vs. Guyer	Friday, November 10
Butt vs. Hinshaw	Monday, November 13

SOPHS ENTER TAIN FROSH

In accordance with the regular custom the sophomores entertained the freshmen class Friday evening, 20th. The affair was quite unique and every freshie thoroughly enjoyed himself. The company, numbering about thirty, were met by their hosts beneath the maples at the front of the campus. They were divided into groups of ten and being held in place by a rope were escorted to the north end of the canyon. In a hollow tree they discovered a very cunning little booth lighted with Japanese lanterns. Here their hearts were made to rejoice for they were each given an "all-day" sucker. Then winding their way over logs and scrambling through bushes in a few moments they came to another delightful booth covered with fir boughs. Each received a very mysterious looking bag and then proceeded to wander along down the trail with much merriment and laughter. Apples and loganberry juice were added to their supply here. When they arrived at the south end of the canyon a big, roaring bon-fire greeted them. The company were entertained for awhile by playing various games and telling stories. Finally the bags were again produced and an abundance of eats were disposed of with much merrymaking.

The party was chaperoned by Prof. and Mrs. Lewis. The freshmen now feel that they know Pacific College better and have learned to appreciate our "million dollar" canyon more.

ALUMNI NOTES

Carroll E. Kirk '01 has been recently made general secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association of Bellingham, Washington.

Rev. Perry D. Macy '07 was married July 3rd at South China, Maine, to Miss Mary Jones. Their present address is Vassalboro, Maine.

Two members of the alumni association saw service with the American troops on the border during the summer—P. H. Vickrey '08 who is sergeant of Company "E" of Portland, and Walter L. Spaulding '07 of Salem, lieutenant 3rd Battalion, O. N. G.

The third death in the ranks of the alumni occurred last July in the passing of Miss Lida J. Hanson of the class of 1896. For several years Miss Hanson had been teaching in Kansas.
